DANGER FROM AMERICA.

A British consular report on the trade of Marseilles, France, says that the most vital question for the United Kingdom for the moment is the determined attempt of the United States to monopolize the coal imports.

It is added that a large share of trade in the future in Marseilles and the south of France will be with the United States, largely at the expense of the United Kingdom, unless British traders wake up to the danger, meet it by diligent investigation and fight it by combination. A great coal combination is contemplated. With it, American coal will surely go to the French market, although it will be unable to oust British coal. It will simply be a question of freights and quality, both of which are against the United States, but the proposed combination looks dangerous.

The consul, in giving some details of the combination, says that as soon as the United States subsidize shipping the combination will build a fleet of vessels and construct huge depots at Marseilles, Genoa and Salonica, facilitating the work at those places with labor saving machinery. The vessels will also trade with Manila, taking whatever freight is available when they have no coal to carry. They will also carry passengers.

The combination will manufacture briquettes at its Mediterranean depots, working its machinery with electricity produced from water power. These briquettes are made by mixing petroleum and refuse coal, and the product is little inferior to the best Cardiff coal. Already a station has been acquired on the River Durango, which is capable of furnishing twenty thousand horsepower.
